ANOTHER MILE OF CONCRETE SPREAD

Residents On Jack's Creek Pike
Soon Can Use New Lexington
Road

Another mile of concrete has been laid on the Lexington road by the Carey-Reed Company, Lexington contractors, who have been working on this job since last May. They are now within 100 yards of Jack's Creek pike and will soon have the road open that far. The time for completion of this mile was a good deal shorter than for the finishing of the first mile. A little over a month was spent in construction of the last mile while it took almost five months to have the first mile ready for use. No work was done Wednesday as the state road men turned down a shipment of gravel sent down the river to Clay's Ferry where almost all the material has been landed in the last few weeks. The gravel was said to have had an excess amount of coal shales and muscle shells in it. County Road Engineer Baxter says that he expects the work to be in full blast again Thursday.

The residents of the Jack's Creek section will rejoice to hear that the concrete will soon be spread to their pike which will allow them to use the new road by the middle of October when the dirt will be removed from over the concrete. They have been using Goggin's lane to get to Richmond. The first mile is under use at this time and is a real road. As yet the shoulders have not been put on it. The workers are at a fast clip at present and should complete another mile or two before stopping for winter. This can be done it is thought if a steady supply of materials can be secured.

I. & N. SETTLEMENT CONFERENCE FAILS

(City Associated Press)
Louisville, Ky., Sept. 16—First efforts at a conference of striking shopmen and Louisville and Nashville officials here today to settle the strike apparently failed. While no word came from the conference room, it is understood the strikers endeavored to induce President Mapother to accept the terms of the Chicago agreement and failing in that sought terms on which the road would settle.

A little later a statement from Mapother's office said that there is no possibility of negotiating a settlement on the basis of the Chicago agreement, but that as suitable vacancies exist strikers will be taken back only as new employees.

"The rights of 10,294 employees," the statement said, "will be protected to the limit."

The strikers, however, say that they are optimistic about a settlement.

MADISON MEN HELD OVER IN FAYETTE

Vanderpool's and Jesse Medford,
Near Valley View, Charged
With Dry Law Violation

On a charge of operating a moonshine still, Sam Vanderpool and his son, Elmer, both of Madison county, and Jesse Medford, son-in-law of the elder Vanderpool, were held by the Fayette county grand jury under $500 bond at their examining trial Friday at Lexington before County Judge E. H. Doak. The still was found a few days ago on J. W. Denton's farm near the Kentucky river.

The evidence used by the Commonwealth against the defendants was largely circumstantial. When the raiding party approached the neighborhood, the elder Vanderpool ran down the riverbank and shouted to Medford on the Madison county side of the river. Shortly after a ringing bell was heard by the Fayette and Madison county raiders, and it was thought by the officials to be a warning to the alleged moonshiners.

The charge was denied by all of the men. Medford said that the path to the spring by the side of which the still was found was used by his family to bring water to the house, and if the still was located there it was moved there recently and without his knowledge. The two Vanderpools showed by Burgin Howard, merchant at Valley View, that they were citizens of good standing and operated a farm on the Madison side near that place.

The warrants sent to Lexington from Madison county, charging Elmer Vanderpool and Jesse Medford with possessing intoxicating liquors and obstructing justice, were filed away. A new warrant charging the parties with conspiracy to violate the state prohibition laws was sworn out against the men by County Attorney Spence S. Carriek.

Deputy Sheriffs Hugh Samuels and R. O. Moberly, of Madison county, assisted in presenting the case. The accused men were defended by Attorney J. J. McBrayer and County Attorney Carriek represented the Commonwealth.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH CLOSES CONVENTION

Every Sunday School In County
Represented—Many Outsiders In Attendance

The annual convention of the Christian churches which has been in session at First Christian church here for the past two days, closed its sessions Thursday afternoon. Some 150 delegates, representing the 13 organizations of Madison county were in attendance, while the speakers were drawn from various sections of the state. Prominent among those from outside the county who addressed the convention were J. S. Hilton, Mrs. W. C. Stanley, Mrs. J. T. Sullivan and Neale McGowan, from Louisville; H. C. Riley, of Lexington, and E. B. Bourland, of Lancaster.

The various departments of the church were represented in the convention and presented programs of exceptionally high order. This convention marks the culmination of quarterly conferences which have been held during the past year in the county through which the Christian churches have been brought into a program of co-operation which gives large promise for the future. Every church in the county was represented by delegates in the convention.

The ladies of the First Christian church served luncheon on both days to the convention.

A definite program for future work was adopted in the session of the closing day and will be inaugurated at a luncheon conference of leaders to be held at an early date at the Glyndon Hotel.

From every point of view the convention was considered the best which has ever been held by this religious body in Madison county. The officers of the convention, J. W. Arnold, president, and F. M. Stiver, secretary, who have done such a splendid work during the past year, were re-elected along with others who will head the various departments of work.

One of the interesting aims of the convention was the naming of the 15th of October as Disciples of Christ Day in Madison county. On that Sunday an effort will be made by every church in the county to have every member present at a communion service. The various churches are co-operating in this effort.
